

Maintenant Miou habite chez lui, avec Dina, à la boulangerie, au numéro deux de la rue Yacoubian. Il mange du lait le lundi, le mardi, le mercredi, le jeudi et le vendredi. Mais le samedi et le dimanche, il change de maison et il mange aussi de la viande à la boucherie, des biscuits à l'épicerie et du poisson à la poissonnerie!

1. Listen to the text while you read the script.
2. Can you recognise the masculine nouns for food? Circle them in blue.
3. Can you spot the feminine noun for food? Circle it in red.
4. What about the plural noun for food? Circle it in green.
5. Focus on the word before them and see if you can figure out how to fill the grid below:

Noun for the food	Gender (masculine or feminine?) Number (singular or plural?)	Word placed before the noun

The little word placed before the noun is called a partitive. It's used in French when we talk about having part of something, only some of it and not the whole thing.

Discuss with a partner what you think the rule is to use the partitive.

Can you work it out?